KOCH BROTHERS EXPOSED

This film investigates, exposes, and connects the dots about what happens when billionaires try to buy up democracy. Filmmaker Robert Greenwald, who gave us “Rethink Afghanistan” and “Wal-Mart: The High Cost of Low Price,” has created a gripping film that shines a light on wrong-doing, political lobbying, and money-fueled influence in America. The film uncovers tactics used by the Koch brothers to sway political power in their favor. With appearances by Bernie Sanders, Van Jones, Bill McKibben, Jim Hightower, Katrina vanden Heuvel, John Nichols and others, the film exposes the dangers of unchecked influence concentrated in the hands of the few. This includes their efforts to suppress voter rights, re-segregate public schools, weaken EPA regulation, privatize Social Security, capture politicians, mold the news, and even influence what is taught and by whom in our universities. This film is a wake-up call for people across the political spectrum to take action to halt the selling off of our democracy.

“Every person in this country who cares about democracy should care about this work.” – Ed Schultz

Light refreshments will be served.

A panel presentation and a Q & A with Tom Shepherd of the Southeast Environmental Task Force, Mitchell Szczepanczyk of Chicago Media Action, and Beverley Walter of CAPOW! (Citizens Act to Protect Our Water) will follow the film showing.

61 min. 2012.
